

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are poor has increased.

There are two main reasons for this. First, the world population has increased by 1.5 billion people since 1980. Second, the number of people who live in poverty has increased in many of the world's poorest countries. This is because the economies of these countries have not grown fast enough to create enough jobs for all the people who need them.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased.

For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased. For example, the price of some of the basic necessities of life, such as food and clothing, has increased. This means that people have to spend more money to buy these things, and so they have less money left over to spend on other things.

There are also some other reasons why the number of people in poverty has increased.