

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000). The prevalence of mental health problems is also increasing in children and young people (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for mental health care in the UK, which is based on the principles of recovery, self-help, and community care. The vision is to ensure that people with mental health problems are able to live full and meaningful lives, and that they are able to participate in the community. The vision is also to ensure that people with mental health problems are able to access the services that they need, and that they are able to receive the support that they need.

One of the key challenges in achieving this vision is to ensure that people with mental health problems are able to access the services that they need. This is a challenge because many people with mental health problems are unable to access the services that they need. This is often because they are unable to pay for the services that they need, or because they are unable to access the services that they need. This is often because they are unable to pay for the services that they need, or because they are unable to access the services that they need.
