

the 1990s, the number of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia has increased in the United Kingdom (Meltzer and Peck 1998). The prevalence of schizophrenia in the United Kingdom is estimated to be 1.2% (Meltzer and Peck 1998).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The United Kingdom has a number of government departments and agencies that are involved in the care of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Department of Health is responsible for the overall policy and funding of the health service. The Department of Social Security is responsible for the provision of social security benefits to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Home Office is responsible for the provision of accommodation and support for people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Department of Education is responsible for the provision of education and training for people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia.

The National Health Service (NHS) is the main provider of health care in the United Kingdom. The NHS is a public body that is funded by the government. The NHS is responsible for the provision of a wide range of health services, including the treatment of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The NHS is also responsible for the provision of social care services to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia.

The Local Authorities are responsible for the provision of social care services to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Local Authorities are also responsible for the provision of accommodation and support for people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Local Authorities are funded by the government and the local community.

The Charities are also involved in the care of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The Charities are private organizations that are funded by the government and the local community. The Charities are responsible for the provision of a wide range of services to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia, including the provision of accommodation and support.

The voluntary sector is also involved in the care of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The voluntary sector consists of a wide range of organizations that are funded by the government and the local community. The voluntary sector is responsible for the provision of a wide range of services to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia, including the provision of accommodation and support.

The private sector is also involved in the care of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia. The private sector consists of a wide range of organizations that are funded by the government and the local community. The private sector is responsible for the provision of a wide range of services to people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia, including the provision of accommodation and support.