

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are poor has increased.

There are two main reasons for this. First, the world population has increased by 1.5 billion people since 1980. Second, the number of people who are poor has increased in many of the world's poorest countries. This is because the economy in these countries is not growing fast enough to create enough jobs for the growing population.

There are also some other reasons for this. For example, the price of some of the world's most important crops, such as wheat and rice, has fallen. This has made it harder for farmers in these countries to make a living. Another reason is that the cost of living has gone up in many of the world's poorest countries.

There are many things that can be done to help reduce the number of people who are poor. One of the most important things is to create more jobs. This can be done by encouraging investment in the private sector and by providing training and education for people who are unemployed.

Another important thing is to improve the infrastructure in these countries. This includes building roads, bridges, and schools. It also includes improving the water supply and the electricity supply. These things are all important for people to be able to live and work in these countries.

There are also some things that can be done to help people who are poor to get out of poverty. For example, people can be given loans to start their own businesses. They can also be given training and education to help them get better jobs.

There are many other things that can be done to help reduce the number of people who are poor. The important thing is that we all work together to make a difference.
